Contact the Sportsbook

The first step is to contact the sportsbook and ask them to close your account and withdraw your funds. Most sportsbooks will have a customer support team that can help you with this process. You will need to provide the sportsbook with your account number and personal information, such as your name and address.

Once you have contacted the sportsbook, they will typically process your request within a few days. However, it is important to note that some sportsbooks may charge a fee for withdrawing your funds.

Use a Third-Party Service

If you are unable to contact the sportsbook or if they are not able to help you get your money out, you may want to consider using a third-party service. There are a number of companies that specialize in helping people withdraw their funds from old sportsbook accounts.

These companies typically charge a fee for their services, but they can be a helpful option if you are unable to get your money out on your own.

File a Complaint

If you have tried all of the above options and you are still unable to get your money out, you may want to consider filing a complaint with the relevant regulatory authority. In the United States, you can file a complaint with the Federal Trade Commission (FTC).

The FTC can investigate your complaint and take action against the sportsbook if they have violated any laws.

Getting your money out of an old sportsbook account can be a challenge, but it is not impossible. By following the tips in this article, you can increase your chances of success.

Here are some additional tips to keep in mind:

* Be patient. It can take some time to get your money out of an old sportsbook account. * Be persistent. Don't give up if you don't get your money out right away. * Be prepared to provide the sportsbook with documentation. You may need to provide the sportsbook with copies of your ID and proof of your address. * Be aware of the fees. Some sportsbooks charge a fee for withdrawing your funds. * Consider using a third-party service. A third-party service can help you get your money out of an old sportsbook account, but they typically charge a fee for their services. * File a complaint. If you have tried all of the above options and you are still unable to get your money out, you may want to consider filing a complaint with the relevant regulatory authority.
