Frances is a single mother with two young children. She works as a real estate agent, but she is not particularly passionate about her job. She longs for something more, but she is not sure what that is.

One day, Frances gets a call from her sister, Becca. Becca is getting married and she wants Frances to sell her house. Frances reluctantly agrees, and soon she finds herself immersed in the world of other people's houses.

Plot

As Frances sells other people's houses, she begins to reflect on her own life. She realizes that she has been living in a rut, and that she has lost sight of her own dreams.

One day, Frances meets Dave. Dave is a divorced father with two young children. He is funny, kind, and intelligent. Frances is immediately drawn to him, and they soon begin dating.

As Frances and Dave's relationship grows, she begins to question her life choices. She realizes that she wants more than just a job and a house. She wants to find a partner who she can share her life with, and she wants to find a purpose that makes her feel fulfilled.

Frances' journey is not easy. She faces challenges both in her personal life and in her career. But through it all, she learns to find strength within herself. She learns to let go of the past and embrace the possibilities for the future.
