Sandra Neil Wallace is a force of nature. She is a woman who has spent her life making a difference in her community. From founding the Neighborhood Assistance Corporation of America to her work with the elderly and the homeless, Sandra has dedicated herself to helping others.

Sandra was born in Chicago, Illinois in 1948. She grew up in a working-class family and learned the value of hard work and perseverance at a young age. Sandra attended Northern Illinois University, where she earned a degree in social work. After college, Sandra worked as a social worker for the Chicago Housing Authority. It was during this time that she saw firsthand the challenges facing low-income families.

In 1979, Sandra founded the Neighborhood Assistance Corporation of America (NACA). NACA is a non-profit organization that provides affordable housing and financial assistance to low-income families. NACA has helped over 1 million families achieve the dream of homeownership. Sandra's work with NACA has been recognized by numerous organizations, including the National Urban League and the United Way.

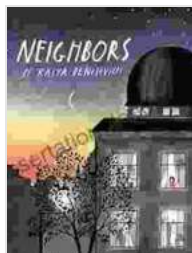

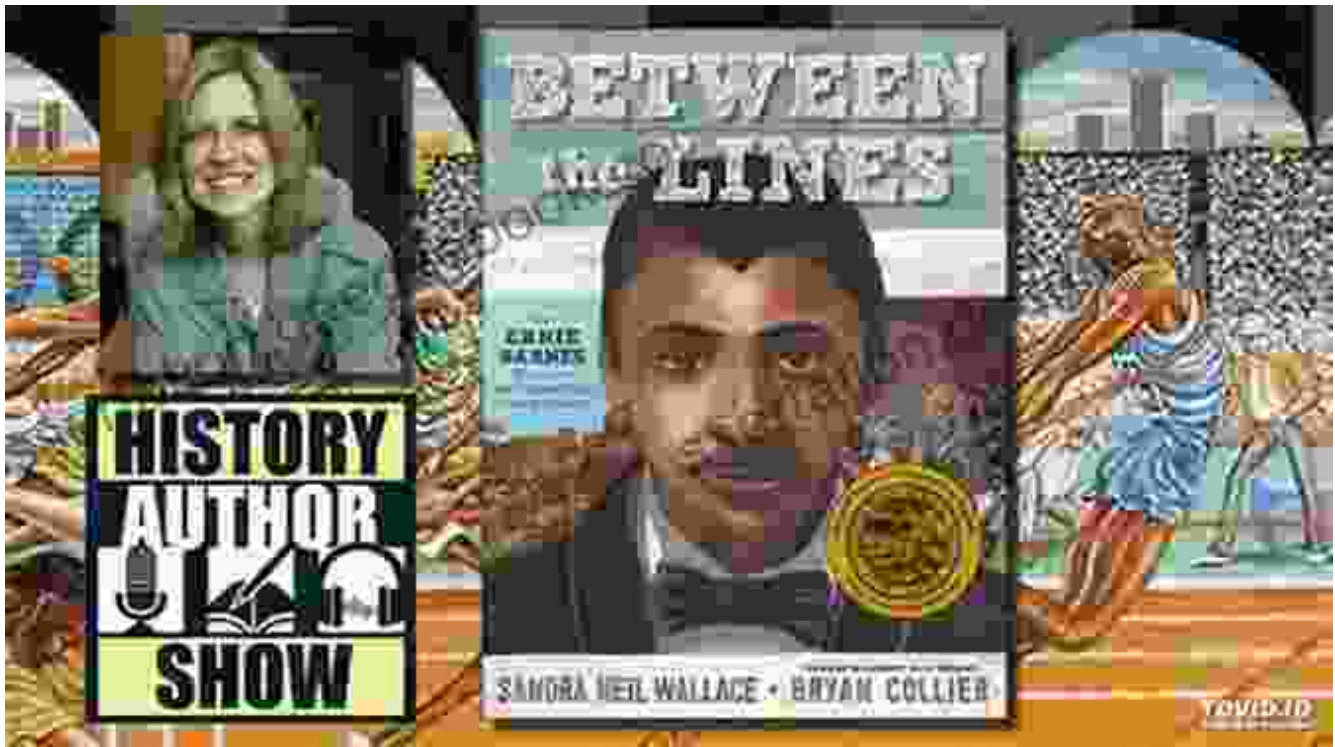

In addition to her work with NACA, Sandra is also actively involved in her community. She is a member of the board of directors for several organizations, including the Chicago Community Trust and the United Way of Metropolitan Chicago. Sandra is also a volunteer for several organizations, including the Salvation Army and the Red Cross.
