Early History

The Lake Shore Electric Railway was founded in 1892 by a group of investors led by William T. Jarvis. The railway's first line opened in 1893, connecting the cities of Cleveland and Lorain. The line was an immediate success, and the railway quickly expanded its operations, building lines to other cities and towns in the region. By 1900, the Lake Shore Electric Railway had a network of over 200 miles of track, connecting Cleveland to Elyria, Lorain, Sandusky, and other communities.

The Golden Age
