The United States' new strategy is a comprehensive plan for the 21st century. It is based on the National Security Strategy, which was released in December 2017. The new strategy outlines the United States' priorities for the next four years, and it provides a roadmap for how the United States will achieve its goals.

The new strategy is based on four pillars:

1. Protecting the homeland: The United States will continue to invest in its military and intelligence capabilities to protect the homeland from terrorism and other threats.
2. Promoting American prosperity: The United States will work to create a more prosperous economy by investing in infrastructure, education, and research and development.

3. Preserving peace through strength: The United States will maintain a strong military to deter aggression and promote stability in the world.
4. Advancing American values: The United States will continue to promote democracy, human rights, and the rule of law around the world.

The new strategy is a bold and ambitious plan for the future of the United States. It is based on the belief that the United States can continue to be a beacon of hope and opportunity for the world. The new strategy will help the United States to meet the challenges of the 21st century and to build a better future for all Americans.

Protecting the Homeland

The United States will continue to invest in its military and intelligence capabilities to protect the homeland from terrorism and other threats. The United States will also work with its allies and partners to build a global network of security cooperation.

The United States will continue to develop and deploy new technologies to protect the homeland from terrorism and other threats. These technologies include new weapons systems, sensors, and surveillance systems.

The United States will also work with its allies and partners to build a global network of security cooperation. This network will help the United States to share intelligence, coordinate military operations, and respond to threats around the world.

Promoting American Prosperity

The United States will work to create a more prosperous economy by investing in infrastructure, education, and research and development.

The United States will invest in infrastructure to create jobs and grow the economy. The United States will also invest in education to ensure that Americans have the skills they need to succeed in the 21st century economy.

The United States will also invest in research and development to create new technologies and products that will drive economic growth.

Preserving Peace Through Strength

The United States will maintain a strong military to deter aggression and promote stability in the world.

The United States will continue to invest in its military to ensure that it has the capabilities to deter aggression and respond to threats around the world.

The United States will also continue to work with its allies and partners to build a global network of security cooperation. This network will help the United States to deter aggression and promote stability in the world.

Advancing American Values

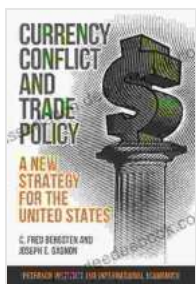

The United States will continue to promote democracy, human rights, and the rule of law around the world.

The United States will continue to support democracy and human rights around the world. The United States will also continue to promote the rule of law and the peaceful resolution of disputes.

The United States will also continue to work with its allies and partners to promote American values around the world.

The United States' new strategy is a comprehensive plan for the 21st century. It is based on the belief that the United States can continue to be a beacon of hope and opportunity for the world. The new strategy will help the United States to meet the challenges of the 21st century and to build a better future for all Americans.
